UNCLE ALLEN'S NIGHT HUNT.

Occasionally in looking over a paper we see a hunting story of some kind, and, as for myself, I always read them. When I was a boy men hunted for profit, but in our days it is called sport. Large basins in the sides of the hills, and sometimes in the bottoms near streams, were the drinking places. and all bear the silent marks of the countless herds of buffalo, elk and deer that once roamed over our forests. They were called deer licks. Near the mouth of Mud Lick branch, in Breathitt county, and on the lands of William L. Hurst, is one of these licks. About one-fourth of a mile from this lick, and at the back side of a bottom now called Banks' field, there once stood a beech tree on which were carved the initials of Daniel Boone and bearing the date 1769. This tree was destroyed many years ago, but was frequently seen by my father and others when the settlement was in its infancy. No doubt Dan and his comrades shot and killed many a deer in Mud Lick as marks on the trees indicated that they had remained here long enough to replenish their supplies of provisions. From the above date, or near that time until the present, the extermination of game has been the pride of the hunter.

Well, I promised to tell of a hunt and must proceed, but before doing so I wish to say that what I have written is true, and what I am going to write is as most stories. The hunt took place about 15 years ago, and was one of those exciting 'coon hunts so common in those days. The time of the hunt and the place of meeting (which was at my house) had been fixed. Chief among the hunters was Vach Gibbs. Vach had a 'coon dog which he called Hurley. Most everybody around here remembers old Hurley. The time for the meeting had come and the hunters had met. Old Hurley was the only dog in the hunt and no one in the party doubted his ability to catch or tree every 'coon which he might scent the sign of, for many had been the 'coon hides and 'possum skins caught by old Hurley and sold by his master at J. R. Elkins' store. Well, supper was over, the moon was up and Vach declared it was time to go. So I seized my rifle and we were off. Our hunting ground lay on a creek called Frozen. We were not long entering the woods and were soon on good hunting grounds. Old Hurley was now off and busily hunting for game. Having gone a short distance into the woods, we thought proper to stop and wait until the dog came up. We did not wait long until we heard old Hurley's familiar bark about a half mile away. "That dog's treed," said Vach. Off we went and were soon at the place. There was old Hurley looking up into a big white oak which was standing on a hillside so steep that it was almost impossible to get to it. Looking up into the tree we could plainly see an animal standing on a limb and looking almost as large as a big dog. "That's one of the biggest wild cats that run these woods," said Vach. We both commenced moving up the hill in order to get in better range, for he and I were the ones in the party who had guns. I began to stumble and fall and as I went my gun struck a tree, and as I held onto the stock, the barrel went sliding down the hill. I caught it, however, and proceeded to tie it together with a hickory withe. While I was doing this Vach's gun fired. The animal began to utter some of the most fearful growls I had ever heard. "Shoot that catamount," said Vach; "it's going to jump and will eat up my dog and us too." "I can't tell how to aim," said I; "I've got a withe around my gun." "Shoot quick and take sight afterwards." At the crack of my rifle the catamount uttered another fierce growl and leaped directly upon the dog. Vach ran up to save the dog, but before he could reach him the catamount had torn him almost into strings. The catamount now bounded upon Vach, lighting full upon his breast. I was near at hand, and seizing the catamount by the back of the neck quickly but carefully proceeded to slip my knife into him behind his shoulders I then drew it and cut his throat, but it was some time before Vach and I and the other two men, who had just come up, could pull him loose. This ended our hunt for that night, as none of the party wanted to take the chance of going thro' another such an encounter. This was the last catamount I ever saw killed and not unlikely the last one that was killed in Breathitt county.

Lane, Ky. UNCLE ALLEN.

Foreign Christian Missionary Society.

This is an organization of the Christian churches (Disciples of Christ), with headquarters in Cincinnati, Ohio. President C. L. Loos, of Kentucky University, is the president of the society, and A. McLean, of Cincinnati, Ohio, is the corresponding secretary. The whole world outside of North America, is its field. It was organized in 1875, and already has prosperous missions in Japan, China, India, Turkey, Scandinavia and England, and a mission is soon to be opened in Africa.

During the past twenty-one years this organization has raised and disbursed nearly one million of dollars. Last year the receipts amounted to $93,867.21. This society supports 144 missionaries, has 4,000 members, 26 day schools, with over 1,200 scholars, and 74 Sunday schools, with 4,300 scholars, in foreign lands. It has eight medical missionaries, and last year they treated over 28,000 patients. The various mission stations last year raised about $20,000. This organization has property in foreign lands valued at nearly $200,000

This is a growing enterprise. Last year six new missionaries were sent out, and a larger number are expected to sail this year. There has been an increase in the annual receipts of about $35,000 in less than five years.

The time the Christian churches make their contributions to the work is the first Sunday in March. We have no doubt that the church in this place will do its full share. F. M. Rains, Cincinnati, is the treasurer.

From the figures of Dr. H. K. Carroll, special agent of the United States, it is learned that this religious body (Christian church) made an increase in this country of 44 per cent. from 1890 to 1895. In fifteen years, he says, this body has considerably more than doubled itself. The increase is at the rate of nearly 164 per cent. They now number 1,003,672 members. WM. H. CORD.

Here is Another.

During the late campaign the Daily Kanawha Patriot was the capital organ of the wing of the Democratic party known as the gold Democrats. Saturday evening there was much surprise at a leading editorial in its issue in which was announced the intention to advocate in the future the cause of free silver. Its editor says in part:

"The Democratic party proper cast nearly 95,000 votes in West Virginia in the recent election, while that party styling themselves gold Democrats cast less than 700 votes. For the success of the last named wing of the party we have heretofore been laboring, but we have become fully convinced that instead of achieving anything for Democracy we have only been working for the success of the enemy.

"Running a gold standard paper is only helping the opposition and receiving naught for your pains; they get the spoils, while you get laughed at for the political ass you have made of yourself. The gold standard has been fully tried since '73. As to its success the idle factories and unemployed millions can testify. The bimetallic standard can not make our situation any worse.

"We are fully satisfied that even a fifty-cent dollar, if there is such a thing, is better for the toiling masses than an appreciated dollar that can not be got for labor or trade."

A Wise Judge.

A late ruling of Judge Oliver in the district court at Rock Rapids, Iowa, is to the effect that a man and his wife are both responsible for the payment of a newspaper taken and read by the family. Judgment in the sum of $28 was rendered in favor of the Germania Publishing Co. on the ground that a newspaper is a household necessity. Judge Oliver appears to have read newspapers to some purpose.

FAR, FAR AWAY.

Where, oh where has confidence gone?
Far, far away.
'Twas promised in chunks by the ton.
Far, far away.
Elect me, 'twill come, was McKinley's cry;
Mars Hanna swore it was no lie,
Now Wall street points us up to the sky,
Far, far away.

Where, oh where, did prosperity go?
Far, far away.
Is the thing we all would like to know,
Far, far away.
The banks they are bursting by the score,
Wages are lower than ever before,
And prosperity is on the other shore,
Far, far away.

Where, oh where, can we find the gold?
Far, far away.
'Twould make us all rich, we were told.
Far, far away.
They said it would come and start the mill,
Hard times and poverty it would kill,
But it never came closer than Wall street's till,
Far, far away.

Where, oh where, can those jobs be found?
Far, far away.
That labor was to get if money was sound.
Far, far away.
About those jobs they told us a lie,
The only job is McKinley pie,
For now they are winking the other eye,
Far, far away.

In nineteen hundred where will they be?
Far, far away.
From an outraged people they'll have to flee,
Far, far away.
With Wall street promises they'll not be caught,
The voters with Bryan will cast their lot,
And send gold bugs where the climate is hot,
Far, far away.

TWO OLD BUILDINGS.

Oldest Church in the Entire State.

The oldest church in Fayette county, if not the oldest in Kentucky, according to the Lexington Leader, is the Walnut Hills Presbyterian church, located eight miles from Lexington, in East Hickman precinct. The church was established in 1785, when the congregation of Presbyterians built a house of worship of logs near the site of the present church. For sixteen years this pioneer church building did service, but the congregation grew in numbers and wealth, and in 1801 the present church building was erected. It is built of Kentucky limestone, and is fifty by sixty feet square and about forty feet high. There is no attempt at architectural effect, further than the four gothic windows on each side and the large gothic door. At the time of its erection it was the finest church building in Kentucky, as its cost was $5,000. The first pastor was the Rev. Alexander Crawford, who served in that capacity for twenty-five years. Among the other prominent ministers who were pastors of the church may be mentioned the Rev. Robert J. Breckinridge and the Rev. J. J. Bullock, who was chaplain of the United States senate.

First School House in Kentucky.

On a hill-side, near the border line that divides Woodford from Fayette county, stands a dilapidated stone building that was the first educational institution erected west of the Allegheny mountains. It is considerably more than 100 years old and the school conducted within it walls was an original branch of the famous Transylvania university.

Two presidents—George Washington and John Adams—made liberal contributions towards building and maintaining this school.

Among the famous men who, as boys, received the first rudiments of an education in this stone schoolhouse were Gov. Allen Trimble, of Ohio; Gov. Clark, of Kentucky; J. Cabell Breckinridge, the father of Gen. John C. Breckinridge; Dr. Robert Breckinridge and his son, ex-Congressman W. C. P. Breckinridge; Thos. F. Marshall, Kentucky's famous orator, and Dr. L. W. Green, president of Hampden-Sidney college.

For the past ten years the historic building has been utilized as a storehouse for plunder.

An exchange tells of a delinquent subscriber who paid up all arrearages and one year in advance and recovered from a severe case of chronic rheumatism. Come in, gentlemen, and throw away your crutches.

CONSPIRACY

To Kill Judge and Prosecutor Confessed By "Bad" Gratz Arnett.

A Paintsville special to the Enquirer says: This morning in the Magoffin circuit court Gratz B. Arnett made a confession in which he stated that Leander Risner encouraged him to make the attempt on the life of Judge D. B. Redwine. He also stated that they intended to call on Commonwealth's Attorney Alf Howard the same night, but owing to the excitement in their call on Judge Redwine they thought it best not to do so. As soon as the confession was made by Arnett Commonwealth Attorney Howard had the case of the commonwealth against Leander Risner redocketed.

In the famous Risner-Deskins battle near Salyersville on new year's day, 1894, in which Bill Deskins and John Davis were killed and a number wounded, Leander Risner was indicted for the murder of John Davis and after several unsuccessful attempts at securing a jury Commonwealth Attorney Howard agreed that the case be filed away during good behavior of the prisoner.

Risner was arrested and placed under $2,500 bonds and the case set for the June term of the circuit court.

FOUR MEN AND A BOY IN JAIL,

Accused By the Coroner's Jury of Murdering Cockram.

A Mt. Sterling special to the Enquirer says: The cold-blooded murder of James M. Cockram, the Jeffersonville merchant, at the house of Widow Kennedy Tuesday night, produced another sensation today, when four more suspects besides Bury Haywood were landed in jail. The inquest was begun this morning before Coroner George C. Eastin, and lasted till late in the day, and when the jury returned from their room they exploded a bombshell.

The verdict was: "We, the jury, find that the killing of James Cockram was the result of a conspiracy concocted, planned and executed by Bury Haywooy, John Smith, Henry Hawkins, Robert Chambers and Robert Sheppard." The last four were witnesses in the case, and eagerly testified in behalf of their friend Haywood. Before they could get out of the city warrants were served on them and all were placed in jail.

Chambers and Hawkins made every effort to secure bail, but were not successful. Chambers is constable of precinct No. 4, this county, and is a candidate for re-election. His excuse for being at the Kennedy woman's house on the night of the killing, and his failure to arrest Haywood was considered insufficient. Smith is from Clark county, and is a stranger here. Hawkins is a farmer and a shrewd politician, but has never been in serious trouble before. Sheppard is only about 14 years of age, but is regarded by the authorities as tough as they get them for his age. It may be that he will turn state's evidence and tell the whole story. There was great excitement when the arrests were made, but cool-headed men have quieted things, and it is believed that the law will be allowed to take its course unless Sheppard should tell it all, and then the prisoners would be in great danger.

Tom Hollon, of Lane, is attending school at the academy here, and who believes truly that courtship and scholarship will mix, started for Aberdeen late Saturday evening, but was arrested at Oklahoma and brought back. The last we saw of him he was standing in front of a dorabell ringing—his hands.

On the 13th inst., John Tutt, son of Elvin Tutt, of Campton, was fatally shot by Dave Spencer, near Torrent station, on the L. & E. railroad, in this county. According to the information able to obtain, it was one of the foulest deeds ever done on Wolfe county soil. Tutt fell in with two lewd women under the escort of Dave Spencer and Adkins. Adkins and Spencer were drunk and immediately began cursing and abusing Tutt. Spencer drew a pistol and Tutt, who was unarmed, begged Spencer not to shoot him. Spencer hesitated, and Adkins told him to shoot if he intended to. He fired four times at Tutt with the result that Tutt was shot through the body twice and can not recover. County Attorney A. H. Stamper went to Torrent on the 15th and took Tutt's dying declaration. Adkins is in jail here and will have his examining trial on the 18th inst. Spencer is at large.

Roadmaking by Convicts.

The only way prisoners can be employed without competing with free labor is to put them to work on public improvements that could not be constructed for years to come but for the utilization upon them of labor of this sort. In this way there may be secured improvements of inestimable value for all time that the public might not have felt warranted in constructing under other circumstances. There is no doubt that good roads would be worth almost any amount to a community, but it is practically impossible to get taxing bodies to take from the people the sums necessary for their construction. Making of good roads would be in many respects ideal employment for a portion of the state's convicts, and the proposition so to employ them has been revived in New York. The chief objection to the plan, peculiarly enough, is a sentimental one. It is argued that the popular sense would revolt at the sight of convicts under guard at work in the presence of the public. This objection has some weight, but it should not be made to appear insuperable.—Chicago Record.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

For County Judge of Morgan County.

We are authorized to announce JOHN A. OLDFIELD as a candidate for County Judge of Morgan county, subject to action of the Democratic primary.

For County Attorney of Morgan.

We are authorized to announce WALTER C. KENDALL as a candidate for the office of County Attorney of Morgan county, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

THE Kentucky river civil bill, reported to house last week, carries no provision for the improvement of the Kentucky river, which was placed under the contract system by the last river and harbor bill. The cost was estimated at $1,380,000, and a contract not to exceed that amount was authorized. A revised estimate makes it $2,400,000 and the attorney general says that nothing can be done until congress authorizes the contract under the last estimate.

DURING the campaign last fall Hon. W. J. Bryan, Democratic candidate for president, was a guest of the Louisville hotel for breakfast one morning. In the lobby of the hotel were some 20 or 25 gentlemen who, when the distinguished gentleman made his appearance, introduced themselves and bade him welcome to the Falls City. About this time a Courier Journal reporter walked in and seeing Mr. Bryan, introduced himself, saying: "I am a reporter for the Courier Journal." "Ah, yes; by the way, the Courier Journal is published in this place, is it not?" said Mr. Bryan with a smile, and the reporter is said to have left footprints on the pavement that made the bricks hot.

SCOTT JACKSON and Alonzo Walling must hang by the neck until dead for the murder of Pearl Bryan, unless Gov. Bradley shall interfere. Last Friday the highest tribunal in the state of Kentucky refused to grant the convicted murderers a rehearing and all that remains now is for Gov. Bradley to fix the day of execution. It is understood that the attorneys for the two men will make an effort to have a hearing before the governor, but this is contrary to precedent in the executive office. When the two men were notified of the action upon their appeal they expressed no emotion whatever, but it is believed that they will weaken before many days, now that they know that their last hope has gone.

JOHN A. OLDFIELD, one of the most popular gentlemen in Morgan county, with this issue announces himself as a candidate for the office of judge of the county court, and from what we can learn through his friends he will be a hard man to beat for the nomination if, indeed, he can be beaten, which appears to be exceedingly doubtful. Mr. Oldfield held the office of justice of the peace some 12 or 15 years ago, and in that capacity rendered entire satisfaction to all concerned, and that is the only office he ever held or asked for, although he belongs to one of the largest and most influential families in the county, and, by the way, a family that never aspired to political honors. Mr. Oldfield individually embodies all the elements requisite to the requirements of a first class presiding officer for the county, and if nominated and elected, will make the county of Morgan a painstaking, popular and economical official. With this introduction and few remarks we abide the decision of his constituents, feeling that they will see him through.

ONE Sunday last summer Senator Joe Blackburn, in his shirt sleeves was lolling on the bed in his room at the Louisville Hotel, and incidentally entertaining a coterie of his constituents, when a rap on the door was heard and Mr. Blackburn's valet ushered in a reporter of the Courier-Journal. After bowing to the gentlemen present and essaying a few commonplace remarks, the reporter turned to the bed and said, "Senator have you anything for publication?" "D—n it, no; if I said anything you wouldn't publish it." The reporter assured the senator that he would be only too glad to indite anything he had to say and that his paper would feel flattered in publishing the same. "Well," remarked Joe, "if you'll do that I'll tell you something." And he said, "If I were his satanic majesty and all powerful prefecter of his pyrotechnical possessions and the Courier-Journal corps of editors, reporters and rustlers should knock for admission in a body, I would welcome them and grant them carte blanche to all the privileges of the place. But I would immediately release all the other inmates lest their morals should be corrupted by contact." But the item did not appear.

He received forty letters, and Miss Rosa Sample had the honor of winning the prize. Here is a copy of the letter:

"REV. F. AGAR, Maytown, Ky.

"Dear Bro. Agar: A feeling of sadness oppresses me to know this is my farewell letter and at the prospect of parting from so kind a friend as you have been and with a vague and uncertain prospect of meeting hereafter. You have always given the young people of Maytown good advice and taught them the right way to live. I want to return to you my sincere thanks for all the good you have done for us, and we must not, after you have left us, look upon the present day as only the day before tomorrow and wear it out with a weary impatience of its length, but take Bro. Agar as an example, and each day that we live try to do some good and appreciate our many blessings. We shall ever cherish with feelings of gratitude the remembrance of the very many favors and kindnesses we have received at your hands, and feel deeply grieved at your absence. May the sun every day when it rises find you well with yourself, and at its setting leave you happy with your friends, and believe me ever yours, sincerely, ROSA SAMPLE."

Hazel Green Hearsays and Happenings.

An Apology.

The condition of the roads for the past two weeks has been such that it was almost impossible for an empty wagon to be drawn by two horses, and in consequence no hauling has been done from the station by wagoners. For this reason our two weeks' supply of ready-prints have failed to reach us and we are from necessity compelled to give our readers only the four pages of home print. We hope, however, that the present weather may last long enough to make the roads passable and that our regular supply will be here in time for our next issue.

Etta James has accepted a position in the store of W. T. Caskey.

Robt. Smith and Charley Shively were guests of the Day House over Sunday.

W. T. Caskey is suffering with rheumatism in his neck and shoulders, but able to be about.

Monroe Stevens is visiting his father and family, on Grassy creek, in Morgan county, since Sunday.

At a meeting of the town council Monday night Arbury Brooks resigned as town marshal and Robert Nodley was appointed to fill the vacancy.

The farmers of this vicinity are busily engaged in breaking ground for crops, and evidently intend to keep pace with the promised prosperity.

Harry Nickell, near Daysboro, now has an emery wheel and is prepared to grind and gum saws of all kinds. Give him a call, you will find his work and prices both all right.

A slight blaze in the roof of the residence of Ed Meeks, of West Hazel Green, on Saturday, was extinguished by John Robinson, Robert and Edward Day and others, without serious loss.

Howard Little, who took 18 or 20 head of cattle to Mt. Sterling, returned Tuesday, and reports the market very dull, even worse than last month. He said there were about 1,100 head on the market.

After an absence of several months visiting relatives and friends in various portions of the state, Miss Minnie L. Day returned home Tuesday evening much improved. Her many friends here bade her welcome.

Rose & Davis have built for Pieratt & Co., liverymen of this place, two buggies, a drummer wagon and a hack. Tuesday the same firm gave them an order for another hack, and this will probably delay their departure for Jackson.

Married, at the residence of the bride's father, John D. Rose, jr., of Lacy creek, on Thursday of last week, James F. Gilbert, of Clay county, to Sarah Alice Rose, Elder J. T. Pieratt officiating. The bride and groom left Friday for Jackson.

Henry Pieratt chaperoned Charley Shively, traveling for Jas. A. Shuttleworth & Co., to West Liberty and other points in Morgan county this week, and the brief association will compel Charley to tell only the unvarnished truth hereafter.

In this issue we call attention to a letter signed by Wm. H. Cord as pastor of the Christian church, at this place, relative to the annual collection for foreign missions. He asks all the members of the church to note what is thus briefly said about that work.

A man out west advertises as follows. "My views on finance are, any man who justly owes owes a dollar and will not pay it, has stolen a dollar, and is liable to steal another if given an opportunity. Over 300 owe me and their names will be made public if they don't come to time." Can't you pay us that subscription you owe us today?

Some farmer friend of the editor will confer upon him a favor if he will bring a bunch of the plant known as "button mint" to this office. It resembles, when in bloom, red clover at a little distance, but on closer inspection shows a button just at the base of the bloom. Who will bring us some of it? Uncle Bill Taulbee, you know what it is.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the Christian church has changed the time of its weekly prayer meetings from Sunday evening to Wednesday evening just after the regular church prayer meeting. For a while only active members of the society will be allowed to be present. Let every active christian endeavorer attend these meetings. There is much good accomplished in them.

A Good One On Taylor.

While the citizens of Hazel Green and vicinity were sweltering in the heat of excitement incident to the late presidential election and eagerly grasping every sentence uttered about the returns, Ernest Elkins, who had just come from Mt. Sterling, let out the news that Mr. Bryan was undoubtedly elected, and in consequence the silverites were all smiles and the Republicans remorseful. But it was generally accepted as true and only the skeptical spectators awaited the confirmation of the truth. About this time a citizen glanced down the state road in the hope of seeing some one who might verify the story, as other citizens of Hazel Green were expected from Mt. Sterling that afternoon, and he espied a man coming in Paul Revere fashion and at once gave a shout of joy. Now we would get the news. That flying horseman certainly had something to make some of the crowd rejoice. He was between the bend and the fair grounds, and it could plainly be seen that he was on a gray horse. Nearer and nearer came the horse and man—a centaur, as it were—and some one remarked, "Why, that's Taylor Johnson coming for a doctor."

On came the horse, and the seemingly wild rider was yelling and beating his horse with his hat, his good right arm never ceasing to apply the lash, and it was agreed it was Taylor crazed with grief. It was him, but joy was shining on his face like a sunflower in full bloom in a Kansas early fall, and yell after yell rent the air as he breathlessly drew up in front of the expectant and excited crowd and blurted out: "B. b. boys, he's got it! Bryan's elected and don't you forget it! Hip, hip, hurrah!" and again he went through the hat and horse gyrations. "Yes, by grim, it's so," and the crowd went wild. But subsequently it transpired that Taylor had received his information from Ernest Elkins, who had delivered the news two hours previous, and the crowd sought silence as a solace to their blasted hopes.

A lady in the town enquired of the horseman as he passed her, and he replied, "Bryan's elected," and she let out with, "Hurrah, here goes my buttermilk!" and to celebrate the event at once, tossed into the air a bucket of buttermilk she was carrying home. When she found out the truth she soliloquized, "There, and now I'll have to borrow buttermilk to make bread for supper." No, we won't tell on her—that is, her name.

The Pieratt Prevaricators.

Bob Dicken started out with "I saw a blind man trading horses and he knew every point about the horse as well as any man with good eyes, and the man with whom he traded said he was the smartest duck he ever saw." Monroe Havens said: "Why, that's nothing, I know a woman who could hold and thread a needle as well as any one." "Why, you fellows are not in it," remarked the wild and wooly western hero, Taylor Johnson. "I saw a man who could tell different colors by feeling as well as any of you can by sight," and a motion was made that Mr. Johnson be promoted to the office of vice president prevaricator at once. "Before that motion is put," remarked Mr. Dicken, "I would suggest that the name of this club be changed to 'The Pieratt Prevaricators,' in honor of our distinguished friend and fellow-fabricator, H. F. Pieratt," and a vote on the proposition so named it. Mr. Johnson was then advanced to the second chair, and on taking his place, inquired why Pieratt was not present, whereupon some member in the back tier of chairs suggested that maybe his extreme modesty (?) forbade his presence, and remembering his reticence, they "let it go at that."

At the Christian Church.

Everybody is cordially invited to the services at the Christian church on next Sunday morning and evening. At 11 a. m. the topic for the sermon is "The Conditions of Life Eternal," and at 7 p. m. "The Final Presentation."

At the Sunday school the Bible class will study the eighth chapter of Acts. This class is growing in numbers and interest. On last Sunday there were forty-one in the class, and yet there is room for others. Go and take your New Testament with you.

The report reached here Tuesday that another killing had taken place in Breathitt county. The affray was occasioned for the possession of a dog, so we learn. A man named Barnett had loaned Newt Trusty a dog, and when Barnett went for him Trusty objected. Tying a rope around the dog's neck Barnett was leading him away and Trusty got a shotgun and killed the animal. Barnett turned, with pistol in hand, and Trusty let go the other barrel at Barnett. Trusty was arrested and taken to Jackson where he had an examining trial Tuesday, but we have failed to learn the result.

Rose & Davis, the wagon makers and blacksmiths, desire through THE HERALD to request each and every person indebted to them to come in at once and settle their accounts and notes. This is made absolutely necessary because of their contemplated move to Jackson, and they hope no one will disappoint them.

In a difficulty at Torrent Saturday Dave Spencer, of or near that place, shot John Tutt, a young man of Campton, four times, inflicting what was thought to be fatal wounds. But on Tuesday morning a telephone message from Torrent stated that the wounded man was some better, though he had been vomiting blood the day before.

Miss Virgie James is in receipt of a letter from her sister, Miss Mattie, who is visiting relatives and friends at Charleston Ill. Miss Mattie says she is meeting with many former Kentuckians who have settled in that neighborhood, and speaks in high terms of the country and the treatment she is receiving at the hands of her many friends.

"Women should be accorded the same political rights as men," is the question to be discussed on next Monday evening at 7 o'clock in the academy chapel by eight of the students. Everybody is welcome. Let all attend and hear these young advocates of "women's rights" pro and con. It promises to be both profitable and interesting.

Everybody has a cold sometime—your turn will come. Keep a bottle of Dr. Bell's Pine Tar Honey on hand and be prepared for an emergency. This famous remedy will cure a cold before it gets fairly started or after it has settled. The sooner you take it the sooner you get well.

Henry Pieratt said a few days ago, "I guess I am the warmest hearted man in the country;" whereupon Bob Smith, who travels for the Carter Dry Goods Co., observed, "Yes; well, that accounts for that hole burned in the left side of your vest; I've been wondering what caused it."

Clay Lacy last week bought of Logan Fallen a tract of land embracing about 75 acres and lying on the waters of Gilmore adjoining C. M. Fallen, for $500 cash. On the place is a good house of four rooms, out buildings, a good young orchard of 100 trees, etc.

H. C. Meleor shipped from Lawrenceburg to New York, in a regular poultry car, 3,800 hens, 200 geese, 125 ducks and 50 guineas.

Mrs. Marion Owens died in Bourbon county a few minutes after supper, and while she was telling her husband how well she felt.

Mrs. Kitty Warren, an aged lady, was found dead in the western edge of Larue county with her neck broken. Foul play is suspected.

A movement has been set on foot to have all the large distillers in the state form a pool similar to the one formed by the tobacco warehouses.

The 7-year old son of Mrs. Mary Holland, of Mt. Savage, swallowed ten pills instead of taking one as directed, and may die from the effects.

Frank Eskridge, a farmer residing near Hardinsburg, raised last year 900 bushels of corn on 20 acres with a single plow and did all the work himself.

Willie Jeffries, of Middlesburg, caught an eagle, which measured six feet and six inches from tip to tip, in a steel trap. He tied a bell to it and turned it loose.

Mrs. Jennie Lillie, who is said to have $25,000 which she recently drew in a lottery, is suing her penniless husband for divorce at Lexington, charging non-support.

Floyd Harper, a 16 year-old boy, died very suddenly and mysteriously in Huntersville the other day. The physicians say it was caused by excessive use of cigarettes.

Walter Collins, aged 20, while walking alongside a small stream in Washington county, was seized with a fit and fell in and was drowned. The water was only 10 inches deep.

A Breathitt county man deposited $1,200 in the Deposit bank of Eminence one day last week. There was a $500 gold certificate and the balance in greenbacks and currency.

Several of the wealthiest and most prominent citizens of Marion county have been indicted for giving to the assessor incorrect lists of their property. The penalty is a fine not exceeding $500.

A boiler exploded in the county jail at Frankfort utterly wrecking the office and seriously injuring several persons who were in the room. James C. Rogers, one of the injured men, has since died.

Mt. Sterling bachelors have organized themselves into a "Gander Club," and meet nightly to have "a good time." Appropriately named, for any woman who marries one of them must be a "goose."

A. Acelinger, an old Knox county farmer, was shot and killed by his son. The old man asked his son for a revolver which he carried, when the young man replied, "I will give you part of it," and shot him through the heart, killing him instantly.

Charles Howard, who lives within a few miles of Vine Grove, has a hen that is 21 years old, says the Elizabethtown News. She is still hale and hearty and nothing seems to mar the happiness or the appearance of the bird except the loss of one eye.

A Tennesseean came into Middlesboro during the recent cold spell with seven small children and offered them to anybody who wanted them. Their mother had just died and he was unable to support them. He had poor success and took all back but two.

Fifty soldiers of the Louisville Legion accompanied William Black, the negro who assaulted Mrs. Clark in Marion county, to Lebanon. Black pleaded guilty to attempted rape and was given the full limit, seven years at hard labor, in the penitentiary. He was delivered there the same day.

A well known Christian county merchant ordered among other goods some rat traps from a wholesale house. When the traps came one of them had six large rodents imprisoned, which, it is supposed, were caught at one transfer station while en route, says the Hopkinsville Kentuckian. The merchant declined to receive the catch, and the wholesale house was notified by the railroad agent that "the rats shipped its customer were refused, and were held subject to their order."

Several days ago Dr. Davis, of Clifton, allowed his cow to run about in the rear yard, says the Louisville Post. She broke into an outhouse and ate a barrel of apples. That afternoon when the maid got through milking she was surprised to notice that the cow had given a gallon and a half of pure, hard cider. Instead of drinking milk that evening Dr. Davis' family enjoyed the cider. Many people heard of the strange occurrence, but did not believe the story. Dr. Davis invited them around to his house the next morning, and, to add proof to the strange incident, he allowed the colored man who works at his house to drink a quart, and the negro became drunk.

Small Wages.

Probably the poorest paid mail contractor in Kentucky, if not in the United States, has been discovered by the Stanford Interior Journal. That paper says: "Ben Hardin, who is just back from Monticello, tells us that Charles Burton, who carries the mail daily except Sunday, from Burnside to that town, gets only one cent a year. It is twenty miles between the points and it is necessary to travel forty miles a day, or 12,520 miles during the year. The payments on star routes are made quarterly, and the question arises as to how Uncle Sam is going to pay the quarter of a cent, but the contractor will not likely sue if the payments are postponed till the last quarter, and then the government can forward the copper, which will be in full. The worst part about the business is that Mr. Burton has the contract for four years at the same rate. The cause of the remarkable low price for the contract is that Burton was determined to have the route over an enemy who was also a bidder, and besides, he had stages and horses which he had been using for years for that purpose. He hardly ever makes a trip without one or more passengers, and at $1.50 each way he may yet come out even. At any rate, he will enjoy the consolation of knowing that he beat the other fellow."

A Catastrophe.

The train was roaring along about forty miles an hour, and the conducter was busily punching tickets full of holes, when a little thin old man who sat in one of the corner seats plucked his sleeve.

"Mister Conductor, you be sure and let me off at Speers Station. You see, this is the first time I ever rode on steam cars, and I don't know anything 'bout them. You won't forget it, eh?"

"All right, sir; I won't forget."

The old man brushed back a stray lock of hair and, straightening himself, gazed with increasing wonder at the flying landscape, every now and then exclaiming, "Gracious!" "By gum!" etc.

Suddenly there was a crash, and after a number of gymnastic moves that made him think of his school days, he found himself sitting on the grass of the embankment alongside the track.

Seeing another passenger sitting a short distance away, patiently supporting various parts of the splintered car across his legs, he inquired:

"Is this Speers crossing?"

The passenger, who was a drummer, and not altogether new to such happenings, replied, with a smile, although in considerable pain:

"No; this is catastrophe."

"Is that so," he irritably exclaimed, "Now I knew that conductor would put me off at the wrong place."—Harper's Round Table

John R. McLean's Great Newspaper.

Without a single exception, there is beyond doubt no greater or more popular newspaper in the United States than the Cincinnati Enquirer; or a more successful publisher than its proprietor, Mr. John R. McLean.

The old-time prices for the Daily Enquirer have been maintained, and its circulation largely increased each year; hard times and cheaper journals failing to arrest its onward march and high appreciation of the public for its true worth and merit.

The Weekly Enquirer at beginning of the campaign year was offered at 50 cents a year, and its circulation increased by the addition of over 200,000 new subscribers; the most substantial and coveted testimonial a publisher could desire.

When asked for the secret of such success, Mr. McLean frankly answers: The Enquirer has no opinions to force upon its patrons, it simply prints the facts and tells the truth that the reader may form his own opinions. By maintaining the price of the paper, more news and greater variety can be furnished, and every class of business interests catered to, which a cheaper journal cannot afford.

The very liberal support given the Enquirer by the public at large, makes it incumbent upon the management to serve it faithfully with zeal and enterprise in minor matters as well as those of greater magnitude.
